

ITV journalism across the schedule recognised with 15 nominations from The Royal Television Society Television Journalism Awards

Published Wed 08 Feb 2023

Corporate

ITV has received a total of 15 nominations in the RTS Television Awards shortlist published today, including a first-time nomination for Good Morning Britain news anchor Susanna Reid in the prestigious Network Presenter of the Year category, as well as a double nomination for ITV News' UK Editor Paul Brand, recognition for Anushka Asthana in the new category of Political Journalist of the year, and a nomination for Specialist Journalist of the year for Dan Rivers.

Amy Welch (ITV News Granada) and Rags Martel (ITV News London) are in contention for the Nations and Regions Reporter of the Year category.

Paul Brand's Partygate story receives two nominations, in the Home News category, and Scoop of the Year.

ITV claimed all the nominations in the Nations and Regions News category. ITV News Granada are nominated for their reporting on the Manchester Arena Inquiry and the Emergency Response, as are ITV News Meridian for their reporting on the East Kent Hospitals Baby Scandal. UTV complete the nominations in the category, for their Dying on the Streets: News Special.

The Crossing for ITV's Exposure strand is nominated in the Current Affairs - Home category, a film from DM Documentary productions piecing together the events behind the tragic capsizing of a dinghy of asylum seekers where over 30 people died.

Afghanistan - No Country for Women, where reporter Ramita Navai went undercover to powerfully expose the reality of life for women under Taliban rule, is nominated in the Current Affairs International category, on the back of its 2022 Grierson Award win for best Current Affairs documentary.

Here's The Story, from ITV News Digital, is nominated for the Innovation Award.

Kevin Lygo ITV's Managing Director of Media and Entertainment said:

"From Good Morning Britain to ITV News and Exposure, it's fantastic to see ITV's programming recognised, across a range of subjects, for our high quality and authoritative journalism."

[ENDS]

Press Contacts

jenny.cummins@itv.com

Viewer enquiries

<https://www.itv.com/contact/how-to-get-in-touch>