ITV commissions a second series of high octane thriller Trigger Point

ITV's hit Sunday night drama, Trigger Point, will return for a second series in 2023.

Vicky McClure will reprise her role as bomb disposal operative 'Expo', Lana Washington, for the Metropolitan Police Bomb Disposal Squad in the new six part series.

Trigger Point was written by screenwriting newcomer Daniel Brierley and produced by Jed Mercurio's HTM Television.

The series which focuses on the Expo officers who risk their lives daily on 'the long walk' towards danger, has been lauded by both critics and audiences alike.

To date, nearly 11 million viewers have watched the first episode and the series is currently averaging 9.24 million viewers for episodes 1-4 as the audience enjoy the series on ITV, ITV Hub and BritBox.

Trigger Point was commissioned for ITV by Polly Hill, Head of Drama.

Polly Hill commented: "I am so delighted to see Trigger Point return. Vicky is stunning as Lana and it's brilliantly produced by Jed and HTM. I can't wait to see where series two takes Lana and her team."

Jed Mercurio commented: "Everyone at HTM Television is thrilled by the success of Trigger Point. Thanks to all our brilliant cast and crew and especially to the viewers who watched in such large numbers. We've received unswerving support from ITV throughout the production and we are delighted to have been commissioned for a second series."

Trigger Point is produced in association with All3Media International, who distribute the series internationally.

Trigger Point is available to view on ITV Hub and BritBox.
